Course Description

Sex and money—intimacy and economy—are often imagined to occupy distinct and separate spheres. Sex and intimacy are located in the private or domestic realm, in spaces of leisure, feelings, care, and personal connections. Money and economy, on the other hand, are purportedly public, located in the market and tied to labor, rationality, and impersonal (non)-relations. This course brings these spheres together, focusing on the links, exchanges, and circuits between the intimate and the economic in diverse cultural contexts.

Our course is organized around three main themes: 1) intimacy and exchange (domestic labor and care work, marriage and the exchange of women, and sex work); 2) commodity circuits (international sex tourism, pornography and the commodified body, sexual lifestyles and consumerism); and 3) sex and social justice (capitalism and queer liberation, new forms of activism). In each theme, we will read Marxist, feminist, queer, and anthropological theory to build working definitions of the key terms and concepts that guide our analysis (for example, reproduction and the division of labor, gift and commodity exchange, neoliberalism and late capitalism). We will apply these concepts to a series of ethnographic case studies: Central and South American domestic workers in Los Angeles, “mail-order brides” from China and the Philippines, sex tourism and race in Brazil, “passenger women” (women who accept money for sex) in Papua New Guinea, BDSM practitioners in San Francisco, and LGBT activist organizations in Los Angeles.

We will be centrally concerned with the relationship between economic, cultural, and political formations, and with the differences race, ethnicity, nation, class, gender, and sexuality make. Together, we will think through the perils and possibilities of new (and sometimes quite old) intimate economies and economies of intimacy. We will ask: How do practices and bodies accrue value? When are intimacies—sexual and social—commoditized? How have transnational flows complicated relationships between sex and money? How do these intersections constrain and/or empower people? And finally, who benefits from such arrangements, and who does not?

Course Texts

All books are available at the Bookstore and are also on reserve at Olin library. Articles are on Moodle and also available as a course pack at Cardinal Printing.

Course Assignments
1. Participation ----- 15% (→ includes Tumblr posts)
2. In-class Presentation/Memo ----- 10%
3. FOUR Tiny Papers ----- 35%
4. Glossary posts ----- 10%
5. Final paper proposal ----- 5%
6. Final Paper or Project – 25%

1. Participation
Your daily preparation and in-class participation is 15% of your grade. You are expected to come to class on time and to contribute to class discussion in a relevant and respectful way. I expect you to be active in discussion and to shape the course with your own interests. When you have read the recommended reading and/or films, volunteer to share that material with your classmates. Your participation should be grounded in the reading—pointing us to relevant sections of an article or to a particular page is most productive. Remember, participation does not just mean talking; it means contributing to our collective learning. Posting on Tumblr is a good way to add to your participation grade if you are particularly shy.

2. In-class Presentation or Memo
You will be responsible for one presentation during the semester, for 10% of your course grade. The presentation will take one of two forms: 1) a small group presentation (of 2-3 students) on one of the “class projects,” or 2) a solo presentation on one of the ethnographies.

• 1) Class project: The projects give the class supplementary information; they are debates or problematics that complement or expand the readings for that day. The projects entail reading additional essays and/or watching a film. Your task is to present this material in a clear, comprehensible way that will enhance the class’s understanding and add to our discussion. Plan to spend 5 minutes explaining the main point of the material and how it connects to the main readings for that day. Follow the summary with something interactive—an exercise, a handout, short clips/media, excerpts from the reading, etc.—so that students can engage with the material. And be sure to leave 5 minutes for questions and discussion.

• 2) Memo: The memo is your chance to guide our discussion of one of the 6 assigned ethnographies. An ideal presentation will draw our attention to one or two particular passages that you find worthy of sustained discussion, and connect the passage(s) to one of our theoretical readings and/or other material from the course. You goal is to lead 5-10 minutes of class discussion through a combination of presentation and discussion questions. You will also turn in a one-page memo that contains your notes and marked passage(s). Your grade will be based primarily on the substance of your presentation/discussion question(s).

You are encouraged to meet with me in office hours to discuss the projects and memos.
3. Four Tiny Papers
You will turn in four 2-3-page double-spaced papers during the semester on the days listed on the syllabus. The total for all four is 35% of your grade. There are five papers listed: you may skip one of them. These papers give you a chance to write out your own critical reflection of the unit’s overarching themes and concepts, connecting and synthesizing the analytical material and the ethnography. Do not summarize. Instead, while you are doing the reading for each class session and reflecting on the unit as a whole, ask yourself:

How does the analytical reading help us think about the ethnography? What (if anything) is missing from the analytical framework that is revealed in the ethnographic case studies? What are the (multiple) intersections between economy and intimacy in the readings? What are the relationships between these intersections and power -- agency, privilege, oppression, empowerment, etc.?

When writing your paper, avoid generalizations and pontificating; instead, focus on one issue or theme in the unit, and explore that with as much detail as possible. Illuminate this argument with specific examples from the readings (the more specific, the better: use quotes from people interviewed, particular stories that illustrate your point, etc.). Part of this assignment is to learn how to make a concise argument, so do not waste your words with extensive introductions or conclusions—just jump right in and get down to business!

4. Collective Glossary
On our Moodle site there is a Glossary called “Key Terms.” Throughout the semester, we will build a glossary of the key terms we explore in this class: intimacy, economy, division of labor, and so on. 10% of your grade is your individual contribution to this collective project, which might take the form of: adding a new definition (based on our readings, independent research, or recommended readings), adding examples and explanations of key terms (ethnographic examples, explanations in your own words), adding summary text (comparing and contrasting different definitions and/or uses of key terms, providing some historical background on the use of terms), linking to other resources (online or scanned readings, webpages), or editing and refining any of this. Because this is a collective project, your grade for this portion of the class is based on the quality of your contributions throughout the semester.

5. Final Paper Proposal
You will turn in a proposal for your final paper (see below) that outlines your research question / starting point in 300-500 words, and includes an annotated bibliography of at least three sources (one paragraph per source) that you have consulted. Ask me if you have any questions on appropriate sources. Your proposal should be as detailed as possible; the point is for you to do some preliminary research on your paper topic so that you understand the scholarly conversation around it, and get a jump-start on the final paper. After you turn in your proposal, we will meet to discuss it so that I can give you additional recommendations and assistance.

6. Final Paper
Your final assignment is a paper/project of 8-10 double-spaced pages. It can be based on course readings, it can be an expansion of one of your tiny papers, or it can entail research on a new topic. Broadly, the paper must be relevant for the course: it must explore an intersection of sex/intimacy and money/economy. Beyond this, the focus of your paper is up to you. Be on the lookout for something you want to examine (and check out the books and essays under “want more?”).
Extra Credit
For extra credit, you may write the additional tiny paper and/or do an additional presentation. Extra credit boosts your final grade for the course.

Course Policies

1. Policy on Absences: You may miss two classes without explanation or penalty: think of these as your sick (or health) days, and take them as you see fit. Otherwise, I will expect you in class. If you miss more than 5 classes, you will fail the course.

2. Policy on extensions and late papers: I do not grant extensions. I will accept late papers with a grade penalty of one whole letter grade (=10 points) per day. For example, the paper is due at 5pm on Tuesday, and, had it been on time, you would have received an A (95). If you turn it in by 5pm on Wednesday, you will receive a B (85). Half days are ½ a letter grade.

3. Policy on computers in the classroom:

Resources
Please come see me in office hours if there is any course material you do not understand, if you want to talk through the course material or dynamics, or if you need guidance on my expectations for papers, presentations, group projects, or any other aspect of this course. Use my online calendar—http://calendly.com/margot-weiss—to make an appointment. If you cannot make any of my available times, email me and I will work out an alternative time to meet with you.

Disability Resources
Wesleyan University is committed to ensuring that all qualified students with disabilities are afforded an equal opportunity to participate in and benefit from its programs and services. To receive accommodations, a student must have a documented disability as defined by Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, and provide documentation of the disability. Since accommodations may require early planning and generally are not provided retroactively, please contact Disability Resources as soon as possible.

If you believe that you need accommodations for a disability, please contact Dean Patey in Disability Resources, located in North College, Room 021, or call 860-685-5581 for an appointment to discuss your needs and the process for requesting accommodations.

Honor Code
All work must be done in compliance with the Honor Code. If you need help with proper citations or you have questions on how to avoid plagiarism, let me know or contact the Writing Workshop: http://www.wesleyan.edu/writing/workshop/
